

Martha Mitchell Is Back in a Hospital

New York

Martha Mitchell is a patient in the Hospital for Special Surgery, where she was admitted after breaking an arm.

Dr. Klaus Mayer, her physician, declined yesterday to say when she entered the hospital or to give any information about her condition.

Mrs. Mitchell, 57, had been in Sloan-Kettering Memorial Cancer Center from November until her release several weeks ago, for treatment of a painful bone cancer.

Mrs. Mitchell and her husband, former Attorney General John N. Mitchell, have been separated since 1973.

A report in the May issue of McCall's magazine pictures Mrs. Mitchell as thin, weak and fighting for her life in self-imposed silence.

It said she has had no visits from Mitchell since being hospitalized last November and she also is alienated now from her 14-year-old daughter, Marty. Her son by a previous marriage, Jay Jennings, 28, is described as her only regular visitor.

Jennings is quoted as saying his mother is responding well to chemotherapy treatments and that her pain has diminished.
