45/67 PRESIDENT SIGNS MEASURE REVIVING ELECTION AGENCY MAY 1 2 1976

Commission Is Authorized to Free $2 Million Backlog in Primary Subsidies

RELUCTANT FORD MOVE

'Serious Reservations' Are Cited-Levi Ordered to Test One Provision NYTimes_

By WARREN WEAVER Jr. Special to The New York Times WASHINGTON, May 11-President Ford reluctantly approved today legislation reviving the major powers of the Federal Election Commission and freeing the agency to authorize the payment of a $2 million backlog of subsidies to candidates in the Presidential

The bill also enables the commission to resume investigating complaints of violations of the campaign law and makes a number of important changes in election ground rules for political candidates and the committees that support them.

primaries.

Mr. Ford said he was signing the bill despite "serious reservations" about some of its provisions, so serious that he directed Attorney General Ed-ward H. Levi to challenge the constitutionality of one of them in court.

6 Members Nominated

The President said he was also sending to the Senate nominations of six commission members but did not announce the names. Presumably, he will rename five of the sitting commissioners plus a replacement for the chairman, Thomas B. Curtis, who asked not to be reappointed.

The new member was reliably reported to be a former Republican Senator, and one party source identified him as Marlow W. Cook, who represented Kentucky in the Senate from 1968 to 1974 and has since practiced law here.

If Congress moves swiftly to reconstitute the commission, confirming the six members named by the President without delay, the agency might be able to start the flow of matching funds to the Presidential campaign by the end of the week.

No Big Impact

Release of the primary subsidies, frozen for the last seven weeks, is not expected to have any material impact on the Presidential primary competition in either party. Three-quarters of the money will go to the three men who are already the leading contenders.

Of the claims already audited by the commission staff, $865.-674 will go to the President Ford Committee. The Ford unit's most recent problem has not involved raising money but keeping within the $13 million spending ceiling imposed on Presidential candidates for the preconvention period.

Ronald Reagan, the Pres-ident's Republican challenger, will get $390,000 immediately, but he reportedly has more large claims ready for submission. Among the Democrats, Jimmy Carter, the leader, will get the most money, $313,850, his chief active rival, Represen-tative Morris K. Udall, has qualified for $113,960.

Continued on Page 47, Column 4

Continued From Page 1, Col. 8

A dozen Presidential can-didates have submitted claims

A dozen Presidential can-didates have submitted claims totaling almost $3.7 million in subsidies, but the commission staff has audited and approved only $2.1 million of this amount. Ordinarily, the com-mission routinely approves staff recommendations for matching fund payments. A President Ford said in a statement that he had con-cluded that approval was "in the best interest of the nation." Changes were made in the bill to meet his most serious objec-tions, he observed, and the resulting measure has "wide-spread bipartisan support in both houses of Congress and by the chairpersons" of the two national political parties.

Veto Power Contested

The provision that the Presi-The provision that the Presi-dent ordered the Attorney Gen-eral to challenge "at the ear-liest opportunity" permits either house of Congress to veto a regulation promulgated by the commission, in theory an independent executive lagency. agency.

The President's action brought to an end more than three months of uncertainty and confusion resulting from the Supreme Court's ruling of Jan. 31 that the election com-mission had been unconstitu-tionally constituted in the first place, in violation of the sepa-ration of powers doctrine. To revive the agency, Con-gress had to make all its mem-bers appointive by the Pres-ident instead of having four of the six named by Congressional leaders. In the process, the law-President's The action leaders. In the process, the law-makers made a number of other Important changes in the campaign law.

Two successive stays held up Two successive stays held up the effectiveness of the court order until March 22. Since then, no subsidies have been authorized; candidates have submitted requests for $3.7 mil-lion, of which $2.1 million has been informally cleared.

Pressure for a Veto

The President had been under considerable pressure from business, industry and conserv-ative groups to veto the cam-paign bill. They all contended it gave too much political pow-er to labor and hobbled the election commission. Despite this financial interest, Mr. Rea-The President had been under gan also urged a veto.

gan also urged a veto. In addition to reviving the commission's investigatory and subsidy authority the 30-page measure approved by the Pres-ident does the following things: OProhibits the election com-mission from issuing advisory opinions or political guidelines that state general rules rather than dealing with a narrow spe-cific problem, and makes all past opinions subject to Con-gressional review. gressional review.

Ilimits the power of corpo-rate political action committees to solicit contributions from rank-and-file employees to two anonymous mailings a year but gives such groups free access to middle-management profes-sional and supervisory workers.

TReinstates limits on the amount of money wealthy can-didates may invest in their own Presidential campaigns if they also accept Federal subsidies. The Supreme Court had struck down any unconditional ceiling on such spending. Requires for the first time public reporting of money spent by labor unions to communi-cate with their members in be-half of favored candidates. Fills in the details of the ¶Reinstates limits on the Fills in the details of the Supreme Court's requirement that independent political ex-penditures, which can be unlimin consultation or cooperation with any candidate and must be reported to the commission with a sworn statement to that effect effect.

Cuts off any matching funds to a candidate 30 days after he receives less than 10 per-cent of the vote in a second consecutive primary in which he actively competed.

Requirements Simplified

The legislation also simplifies The legislation also simplifies off-year reporting requirements for candidates; imposes new, generally lower limits on the amounts a contributor can give to political committees; in-creases the maximum cash campaign contribution to $100 from $50 and exempts legal and from $50 and exempts legal and accounting expenditures from campaign spending ceilings. President Ford signed the bill several hours after meeting with a dozen Republican Com-gressional leaders virtually all gressional leaders, virtually all of whom urged his approval. Several of them called for immediate action, to avoid criti-cism that Mr. Ford was stalling to deprive his political rivals of money.

Representative Guy Vander Jagt of Michigan, chairman of the House Republican Cam-paign Committee, said after-ward, "The very appearance of personal private advantage ought to be avoided."

In the three months that Congress spent squabbling over the legislation, there were numerous accusations that De-mocrats favoring Senator Hubert H. Humphrey were de-liberately delaying the bill to hold subsidy money away from the party's active primary can-didates, but no hard evidence was ever forthcoming. In April. Republican leaders In the three months that

In April, Republican leaders successfully promoted a two-week lapse, in a Congressional recess, raising the question of whether the President was put-ting financial pressure on Mr.

Reagan by extending the subsidy freeze.

dy freeze. Actually, by Congressional standards, the legislation was drafted and approved in a rela-tively short time, considering its length, complexity and the fact that virtually all members regard themselves as experts on campaign law.

The single most sensitive subject in the new law involves political action committees, groups sponsored by either unions or corporations that so-licit waluntary contributions licit voluntary contributions that so-licit voluntary contributions and then distribute the result-ing money among candidates favored by the sponsoring group.

group. The election commission ruled last year that corporate committees have the right to seek contributions from em-ployees, a decision that enraged many Congressional Demo-crats. Today's bill reverses that decision, except for permitting two mailed solicitations that corporations can make of all their workers each year. Union committees are given their workers each year. Union committees are given the same right to seek contribu-tions from officers and stock-holders of the corporation by mail. All such contributions are to be anonymous, to prevent reprisals against those who do not respond.

Republican Congressmen won approval of a provision extending the free solicitation privileges of corporate committees to salaried employees "who have policy.-making, managerial, professional or supervisory re-sponsibilities." No one really knows how large this group may be or how likely to contri-bute

One key provision that has nothing to do with campaign law increases the amount that law increases the amount that Federal officials may earn from speaking fees each year from $15,000 to $25,000 and the in maximum fee per speech from in $1,000 to $2,000. This change was strongly pressed by Sena-tors, some of whom double their public salaries on the speaking tour. House members forced Senate conferees to drop several signi-ficant provisions from the bill, including a proposed study of the Presidetial nominating pro-cess, by threatening to with-hold their support from the raise in honorariums. Resumption of campaign sub-raise in honorariums. Résumption of campaign sub-sidies will ultimately benefit a dozen Presidential candidates, but many of them have already dropped out of active competi-tion. In addition to the funds due to the four leaders, pending payments are: payments are: