

By James K. W. Atherton—The Washington Post

BACK IN TOWN—Convicted Watergate conspirator John D. Ehrlichman, left, talks with Egil Krogh Jr., convicted for his role in the White House "plumbers" unit, after both testified yesterday before a

Senate subcommittee investigating U.S. drug enforcement procedures. Ehrlichman said the White House often injected itself into federal drug control matters in order to achieve "high media visibility."