Watergate Figure Gets Probation For Tax Evasion

New York

Anthony Ulasewicz, the former New York policeman accused of delivering $200,000 in hush money to the Watergate burglars, was sentenced yesterday to one year of unsupervised probation for failing to report as income the $40,000 he was paid.

Ulasewicz, 58, told reporters outside federal court in Brooklyn that he was pleased that the "sting" of the December 23 jury conviction was offset by the lenient sentence.

But his attorney, Dana Winslow, said an appeal will be filed in an attempt to throw out the conviction because Ulasewicz had paid taxes on the $40,000 and cooperated with government prosecutors in the Watergate case.
