with Kennedy book

New York, Dec. 22 (AP)-"The Death of a President" was not the first book which Mrs. John F. Kennedy objected to prior to publication, the New York Times reported today.

The Times said she attempted to block publication of "White House Nannie," Miss Maude Shaw's account of "my years with Caroline and John Kennedy Jr."

Michael Borissow, the book's English publisher, said last night that Sol. M. Linowitz, then an official of Xerox Corp., interceded at Mrs. Kennedy's request in the fall of 1965, the Times reported.

The newspaper also said in part:

Borissow said Linowitz contacted him in London and the publisher agreed to come to New York to "discuss it with Mrs. Kennedy, because we were anxious not to upset her unnecessarily."

As a result of meetings with her representatives, here, Borissow said, "about ~~1000 words~~ 100 words were deleted, small details, nothing important, principally about how the children were told about the assassination."

Borissow, managing director of Angley Books and chairman of Southern News ~~Services~~ Services, Ltd., spoke to the Times from London by telephone.

Linowitz is now U.S. delegate to the Organization of American States.
