

Howl Caen

★ ★ ★

EVER ONWARD: If Bullet Bob Fraser gets the Cliff House — he and Ben Swig are fighting for it — he'll tear it down "because it's an atrocity." Ben merely wants to tear it up . . . UC Medical Center will be the scene of a Vietnam protest tomorrow at noon. A few words from one of the movers & shakers, Dr. Oscar Rambo: "We are protesting in the name of humanity, not in the name of calling names" . . . Cass Canfield, chairman of Harper & Row, was here for the holidays, dropping a quote or two about the Wm. Manchester book: "By the time it goes to press, only about 3500 words will have been cut out of 300,000. Our first printing will be a record — 300,000 copies. Harper & Row will make only $35,000, the rest goes to the Kennedy Library. I think Mrs. Kennedy got excited when she found out Manchester was getting $665,000 for the magazine rights. She had thought of the book as just a book—suddenly it was a big thing. Maybe she didn't realize the implications" . . . Suggesting again that the best remarks are the obvious ones, Matt Kelly asked Mrs. Blair Fuller on N'Year's Eve: "Who won the East-West Game?" Mrs. Fuller: "The Shriners."

★ ★ ★