

NYTIMES

1970

MONDAY, OCTOBER 12, 1970

New Books

GENERAL

- A Modern Look at Monsters, by Daniel Cohen (Dodd, Mead, $5.95). About some fantastic creatures.
- A Modest Proposal, by Jonathan Swift, with illustrations and calligraphy by Leonard Baskin (Grossman Publishers, $13.95).
- A Woman of Quality: Eleanor Roosevelt, by Stella K. Hershan (Crown, $5.95). How Mrs. Roosevelt influenced the lives of some people.
- Birchism Was My Business*, by Gerald Schomp (Macmillan, $6.95). A look at the right-wing extremist organization.
- Children and Youth in America: A Documentary History, Vol 1, 1600-1865*, edited by Robert H. Bremner (Harvard University, $10).
- Everglades*, by Patricia Caulfield, selections from the writings of Peter Matthiessen, essay by John G. Mitchell, edited with an introduction by Paul Brooks (Sierra Club, $27.50).
- Ethics and the New Medicine*, by Harmon L. Smith (Abingdon Press, Nashville, $2.95, paperbound).
- Manifesto: Addressed to the President of the United States From the Youth of America*, edited by Alan Rinzler (Macmillan, $5.95 paperbound, $1.50).
- Man O'War: Horse of the Century* by C. W. Anderson (Macmillan, $7.95). Portfolio of colorings of the famous racehorses.
- Memoirs*, by David Greenglass, compiled by Theodor H. Goldstein (World, $6.95).
- Menuhin's House*, by Yehudi Menuhin, with a foreword by the composer, and a reproduction of the composer's school at the time he was a student in the school, England, with photographs (Praeger, $10.95).