Dear Mr. Jones:

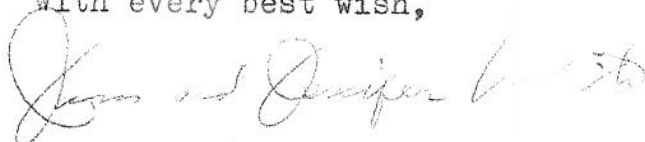

First things first! Before we expire, kindly renew our subscription to The Midlothian Mirror, as per enclosed check.

Your recent visit to San Francisco included a Joe Dolan show, after which we buttonholed you, introduced ourselves, and we all repaired to a nearby eatery for a sandwich (corned beef, I think it was, but at this late date, like Henry Wade, I don't have it exact.)*

To commemorate an encounter that was to us a very special one indeed, my wife has arranged for a small surprise for you which goes off today to you under separate parcel post cover.

Certainly no man needs it less than you, but we send it anyway because my wife noticed that the one you had was getting a bit frayed around the edges.

With every best wish,

* -- My wife (no Henrietta Wade she) says you had hot pastrami, and furthermore ate scarcely enough to keep a bird alive, being busy answering questions.
