NEW YORK AP - J. Edgar Hoover was quoted Sunday as saying the FBI recruited half its 1,000 new agents from officers who had served in Vietnam.

"You get a man who has been in command of men and he has to use good judgment," the FBI chief said in an interview in Time magazine.

"They all have to be above average in personal appearance. You won't find long hair or sideburns a la football star Joe Namath here. There are no hippies. The public has an image of what an FBI agent should look like."
