Basically, the VAR stela, stat he feared "the rights and interests" of the two unnamed
One your children can grow up with. One with endless possibilities.
Mr. Seigenthaler further said on shown hundreds of pages pm the files of an F.B.I. in-estigation of Miss Silkwood's unwise course of conduct in the recent past," the publisher added.
Gell, Democrat of Michigan, who is chairman of the 'sub-committee, said that when ethe panel staff later questioned an Continued on Page 11, Column 4
Banner, her previous employer, and permitted agents to "use My newspaper report?' on civil tights activities. She also con-†ained her testimony of having the information given to me is credible, and I bed by her is credible, and I be-

In an interview, Mrs. Srouji
In taking the action separat-

The F.B.I. refused all com-

The F.B.I. refused all com-

In an interview, said that the F.B.I. agent who had allegedly given Mrs. Srouji access to the F.B.I. files and who initially told the subcommittee she had a special relationship with the bnreau was Larry.Olsen, a

Representative John D. Din-

Representative John D. Din-

Representative Dingell, in an

A Danish furniture system for children.

Access the full article with endless possibilities.

A Danish furniture system for children.

In the context of nuclear power, the article discusses a book titled "Critical Mass," scheduled to be published in mid-June by Aurora Publishers Inc. The author, Mrs. Srouji, is an Oklahoma plutonium worker who has been involved in civil rights activities.

The F.B.I. has pursued investigations into the actions of Mrs. Srouji, including access to bureau documents and alleged "targets." The bureau's tactics have been described as "counterintelligence program" (Cointelpro) from 1956 to 1972.

Mrs. Srouji, in response to questions, said she had been given access to the F.B.I. documents in the spring of 1975.

Access the full article with endless possibilities.