INTRUDERS FOUND AT NIXON HOMES

Secret Service Asks Law Against Such an Entry

WASHINGTON, March 11 (UPI)-The Secret Service di-(UPI)—The Secret Service di-rector, James J. Rowley, dis-closed today that intruders had entered the grounds of Presi-dent Nixon's homes at San Cle-mente, Calif., and Key Bis-cayne, Fla., while the President was there. Mr. Rowley, questioned by cayne, Fia., while the President was there. Mr. Rowley, questioned by newsmen after asking a Senate subcommittee for new laws to tighten security at temporary Presidential residences, de-clined to elaborate but said none of those caught had been armed. "We had to let them go," he said, because present Federal laws do not specifically bar un-authorized entry to Presidential compounds outside Washing-ton. The bill he requested would do so, and also would outlaw noisy demonstrations aimed at disrupting Presidential business. At the White House mean-

At the White House, mean-while, it was said that Presi-dent Nixon, disturbed by treat-ment the French President, Georges Pompidou, received during his recent visit, planned to ask Congess for a new law providing more protection for visiting foreign dignitaries. No details were disclosed, but it appeared likely that Mr. Nix-on would ask that the Secret Service be authorized to protect high-ranking foreign visitors such as Prime Ministers and heads of state. Mr. Rowley told the subcom-mittee that he feared someone might enter the San Clemente or Key Biscayne compounds, "penetrate what he thinks is a weakness in our permeter" and use the knowledge "in the na-ture of a conspiracy with some use the knowledge "in the na-ture of a conspiracy with some violent group." "We have detected these peo-ple, incidentally," Mr. Rowley said. He did not elaborate, and the subcommittee said he could provide details on the intru-sions in a confidential memo-randum randum.

"The probability of an at-tempt upon the personal safety of the President is always pres-tempt upon the personal safety of the President is always pres-ent and always real especially in view of the current climate of unrest, protest and domestic violence existing in the country today," Mr. Rowley testified. The present system of rely-ing on local policemen to con-trol crowds worked "in a quiet-er era," he said. People used to obey Secret Service agents who told them they could not enter estates while the President was visit-ing, Mr. Rowley commented, but now, "when we ask them to move on they ask us what is our authority to deny them en-trance."
