

The FBI's Search Report

What Bremer Had in Car

Washington

"RFK Must Die" and another book on Sirhan B. Sirhan, convicted assassin of Senator Robert F. Kennedy were among the items found in Arthur Herman Bremer's car, according to an FBI search warrant filed in Baltimore yesterday.

Bremer, former Milwaukee busboy and school janitor, is being held on $200,000 bond on charges of shooting Alabama Governor George C. Wallace at a shopping center rally in Laurel, Md. on Monday.

High Federal officials who have reviewed investigative reports on the Wallace shooting said yesterday that there was no evidence whatsoever to indicate that Bremer was a hired killer.

At least 200 FBI agents were still following leads across the country but have yet found no indication of a conspiracy in the Wallace shooting, sources here in Washington said.

Clarence Goetz, magistrate in Baltimore, said yesterday that the warrant used to search Bremer's 1968 Rambler listed six pages of items the FBI took from the car.

Included were 13 gas station road maps, a Rand-

McNally road atlas, two Republican campaign buttons, one Senator George McGovern campaign flyer and one

Wallace poster.

In addition, the warrant listed three suitcases, a good deal of clothing, Bremer's birth certificate, three newspapers and "various pages of lined notebook paper containing miscellaneous items."

Officially, the FBI declined to comment on the search. Other reliable federal sources said the car contained an itinerary for Wallace's campaign in Maryland.

One source said the material taken from the car indicated the 21-year-old Bremer was "driving a hotel on wheels."

The items supported the earlier evidence that Bremer was following the Wallace campaign for at least several weeks.

The campaign material on McGovern and undisclosed Republicans is the first positive indication that Bremer had at least a passing interest in other candidates.

The book, "RFK Must Die," by Robert B. Kaiser and the other book with the title of "Sirhan" came from the Milwaukee public library, according to the warrant.

Kaiser's book, published in 1970, was often advertised as "the book that challenges the police and FBI to reopen the case" and alleged that Robert Kennedy's 1968 assassination was a conspiracy.

Meanwhile, Prince Georges county police yesterday took apart the Bremer car piece by piece, searching for evidence that the FBI might not have found in its search of the car.

"The FBI conducted a search," said assistant chief John W. Rhoads. "We're going into it a little deeper."

The FBI's search of the car was made Tuesday in a service station in Randolph Village, Md., where the car was towed by county police Monday evening.

"They worked on it all day," recalled Thomas Smith, a station attendant.

"It was a junk car, a Rebel Rambler," said Smith. "The fenders were all bent up." He said the FBI fingerprinted the whole car.

Suspect's Brother In Trouble

Miami

Authorities have identified a man wanted here for bilking 600 portly housewives as the brother of Arthur H. Bremer of Milwaukee, who is accused of shooting Alabama Governor George Wallace at Laurel, Md., Monday.

Officers said William Allen Bremer, 32, was free on $2500 bond at his home at Greenwood, Ark., pending a hearing on extradition to Florida May 30 at Fort Smith, Ark.

Authorities at Fort Smith identified the suspect as Bremer's brother and the identification was confirmed by another brother, Theodore, of Milwaukee, who told newsmen there, "when it rains, it really rains hard."

Bremer's Father 'Fears Son Did It'

Baltimore

The father of Arthur H. Bremer, the Milwaukee youth charged with the shooting of Gov. George C. Wallace, visited his son yesterday in the Baltimore county jail.

The Detroit Free Press said Gremer's father told one of its reporters after the visit he feared his son was the person who allegedly fired the shots that hit the Alabama governor during a campaign rally in Laurel, Md., Monday.

"It must have been my boy," the Free Press quoted William Bremer as saying in a copyright story in its morning editions today.

"You start to see all the parts, and they start to add up until you think you have a picture, and you get the feeling it must have been my boy. Listening to the news reports and seeing him there today, I think it must have been my boy," the 58-year-old truck driver told Free Press reporter William Schmidt at the Baltimore airport.

"But I wonder who he's protecting. I mean, if he did it, I know he didn't do it on his own," the Free Press quoted the elder Bremer.

Before visiting Arthur, the elder Bremer had been unwilling to believe the charges against his son.

Coretta Scott King placed the name of Governor George Wallace of Alabama on the same roll yesterday with that of her late husband and those other assassinated Americans who were Wallace's political and social opponents.

The bond among them, she said, was that they were victims of a "violent climate of hate and oppression" which most Americans are too apathetic to sweep away.

"How long does it take to learn the lesson?" Mrs. King asked at a press conference at San Francisco International Airport. "If these warped and distorted minds (of the attackers) are what we have produced in America, we have to re-examine our values."

"No man is free until all of us can be safe," she said.

Mrs. King criticized "those people who stand on the sidelines and say nothing now as they did nothing and said nothing many years ago when Medgar Evers, then John F. Kennedy, Malcolm X, Martin Luther King Jr. and then Bobby Kennedy were killed."

She said the shooting of Governor Wallace was a "tragic" event in American history.

"I disagree with him profoundly, but I defend his right to run for the Presidency and speak for his convictions."

Mrs. King said the "sole purpose" of her visit to San Francisco was to endorse the candidacy of attorney Vincent Hallinan, who is running for the Superior Court judgeship held by Judge Carl H. Allen.

Hallinan, she said, represented the qualities that her late husband stood for — "principled leadership, courageous leadership."

Mrs. King appeared at a dinner for Hallinan at the San Francisco Hilton last night.

The George Wallace for President headquarters at 910 Irving street was in lively operation yesterday, with volunteers gearing up for a write-in campaign in the June 6 Democratic primary.

Keith H. Greene, in charge of the Northern California effort, said the Alabama governor made a final decision to enter the race as a write-in candidate a week ago after his victories in Tennessee and North Carolina.

"But then the tragedy came," Greene said.

All plans were temporarily abandoned when Wallace was shot Monday during a campaign appearance in Maryland, but Greene added, "We just got word that the 'go' was back on."

The campaign will get into high gear as soon as members of Wallace's national staff arrive here from Maryland and Alabama, Greene said.

Even before any public announcements of the Governor's decision were made, the local Wallace office began operations with a single, overburdened telephone and a staff of volunteers.

"I've been very active in the anti-busing fight here, and I'm devoted to Governor Wallace," said Pat Dever, wife of a restaurant manager and the mother of three boys, 2, 5 and 6 years old.

"Governor Wallace is the only hope for my children."

LITERATURE

Gary Marentis, a 24-year-old carpet layer from Ben Lomond, drove up to the headquarters early in the afternoon and took back some Wallace literature to distribute to voters in the Santa Cruz county area where he lives.

"I believe in his principle of conservatism," said Marentis, who is a native of Hollister in San Benito county. "I believe in America first before world opinion."

In Sacramento, Secretary of State Edmund G. Brown Jr. said Wallace can be considered an official Democratic write-in candidate if he sends in a letter declaring his candidacy by May 26.

Some voters may, however, find it difficult to understand the write-in process.

In 14 counties, including

Los Angeles, computerized punch-card ballots that are used provide no space for write-ins. The write-in vote must be written on the back of the envelope in which the ballot is enclosed.

In San Francisco, the voting machines have slots in the extreme upper left hand corner for write-in votes for President. The spot is awkward to reach.
