

6 March 1969

Dear Mr. Weisberg:

Herewith all we can find in our files regarding de Vosjoly, all of which you probably already have. In such case, extra copies will do no harm. Naturally, no photographs. Perhaps a thorough search of the NY Times index back through recent years might turn up something more.

Also enclosed is a clipping from the States-Item at a possibly critical time which easily could have been overlooked. The incident never has been referred to again, either before or] since, by the States-Item. It may mean nothing at all; on the other hand it could have been a signal of some kind. You should have it, in any case. The big unanswered question is when precisely did this man work in the corner's office. At the time of Ferrie? Or Robert Perrin?

We passed your word along the Hal, who no doubt will communicate with you regarding your kind offer.

That's about it for now. Very best wishes from both of us.

Sincerely,

James D. White
