

If one can use the word, I rather enjoyed the Russo piece. The ref to the Rand JFK investigation is sufficiently indefinite to make the suggestion I made to the Secret Service (not yet answered) seem reasonable. They have gotten that letter because the last time Nixon was at Camp David we neither saw nor heard the helicopters. Although it is not new with political prisoners, and I know of cases way back, and even though it had received some attention in the NYPost story, it still seemed incredible that in such a case the pigs would be so violent, would resort to physical abuse. When they behave so calling them pigs is too good. Cossacks maybe, or is that connotation outside your knowledge? H
