

Today's Post has a long society-section story on Fred Malek. It is a fascinating study, well done, of the dehumanized surrounding Nixon. His role in WG (where filed) you know. It is a long piece, for there is always room in the essentially useless sections of "news" papers. He can't be both honest and scrupulous. He went to West Point, got a free education while hating the life, paid for it with three years, went to Harvard business school, and was a millionaire by 30 (now 36)
