One of the reporters I've been backgrounding is Larry Finley of the CDN. He interviewed Cyril Wecht and the News put the story on their wire, but the HIV subscriber, the Post didn't carry it. However, I wrote the ungood doctor a few pointed comments or more likely questions (I've done so much of this lately I don't remember which). He got them not long after he crawled out from under the rock. He has been ducking Larry for days! Neither his office nor his home nor the college nor the hospital nor the research ctr. puts him in the phone and in no case is Larry told he is out of town, sick, unknown or anything. I think Lattimer feels it and soon will a bit worse. It is hard to conceive of Marshall picking him without a check, unless recommended by someone, like a former DJ pal. Nor can I picture Teddy pulling this kind of caper or wanting it or any reference to the materials Lattimer was shown. Right now, these two things puzzle me most, why at this time and who really pulled it. But I thought you'd like to know what Larry told me tonight when I call him to read the political stuff from Lattimer's letter to Medical World News, so he could use it in questioning L. HW
