7-2 The enclosed memo on the autopsy situation is far wfrom representing developments. There is much that for the moment if not forever I must keep in cofnidence not because it is necessary or ever desirable but because it was stipulated. In some cases it may not be a figure of speech to say that some of these people have lost their minds. In one case I think it may have happened. In another I think it impends. And this on personal grounds, not even with full understanding. I don't think any of the zanies and self-seekers and sick have ever considered any of the factors in this political memo, although the political is the first question I raised in seeking a dialogue so long ago. In any even, there is chaos and greater stupidities than I would have though possible, and this makes the potential for evil greater unless it goes far enough to have the opposite effect, now not impossible. If the alwaysOavailable whores in the Wash press in particular are as well briefed as I would anticipate, then one of the near certainties is that Wecht will be ruined by the asking of "did you says", with quotations of what he has said. With no basis for saying any of it. Worse than Garrison at his worst in some ways. One "Long John" show in particular. There is no single decent and responsible reporter who can be uninfluenced by accurate quotation by any such whore. I think it likely this is one of the things that made decision to let Cyril see the stuff easy for those who made it. Prior to this stupidity and self-disclosure, he could not really have been assailed. He is a really impressive man, an authentic expert in his field and his field includes the law. So, sit back and wait. Meanwhile, the front of the jacket is completed, was while I dozed last night, when half of the front was begun. SHE is making very fast time. Not without hope, H
