

There is a clue to Hoover'd death, I think, in one of the NYTimes stories on FBI burglaries you sent me. It says that beginning before he died agents violated his order to end burglaries. Whatever his order, if it was violated the given word has to have been "safely." He probably lived longer than those he trained in the only true course expected him to live. I really can't imagine/ anyone inside doing other than he said if there was any chance of his learning. Someone up top had to know of the shortness of his days to tempt the length of his wrath.
