In the Washington Post clippings you sent for Oct. 10 there was Stan Karnow's piece on Chou En-lai's interview with the 22 American editors.

It contains this paragraph in midsection, with no apparent relationship to anything else in the story, which you probably missed:

The Wall Street Journal's account cited Chou as saying that "the man who planned the assassination" of President Kennedy has never been captured. According to the Journal's representative, Chou said that Lee Harvey Oswald "couldn't be...the one who really killed him."

c.f. a similar remark at the end of a clipping from the SF Examiner for Oct. 11 which we've already sent you.
