

If you have not taken the time to try to piece together the little squibs, suggestions and memos on new leads and info of the past few days, I think you will find little more provocative. It tends to depress me, with all this gold and no miners. There is a limit to what a foreman and an assistant foreman, both of whom have too much to do, can accomplish without help. The overtures I have made along this line this week have resulted in a single and openly interested response Thursday night. I stayed in the house all day Friday not to miss the promised call that did not come. Of the several others, there is one from whom I'd have expected to hear even if there was a turndown, Elfin's man. These odds and ends of note while awaiting the (late) mail so I can take care of it without interrupting other work. I suggest also that if you read the Cahmer's Roberts think-piece on Post's ed page you may see the policy of the Post now, not news but political. And a careful reading of Braden's should make one wonder if Haig was ever in CIA with him. It is incredible (to me) for a self-professed "Liberal" except for his having prayed, "Thank God the CIA is Immoral" (approx.) Congressional policy is Post's. HW 12/1/73
