Very glad to have learned of the special properties of the yellow Carter Hi-Liter from you. It enables me to mark a single copy when I read it without interfering with the copy for you. This is NOT a hint. Much life in the one you sent and I have a second. Didn't go into town this a.m., so I had only the one copy and didn t want to turn the copier on before I awakened LiI. HW 2/10/73

Sent you copy Braden "An Admiral's Boy", Sun-Times 1/31/73. The bottom lines was missing both columns. In each, it is, "Roscoe V. Hillenkotter. he didn't have" and "McCarthy era and the cold war." This column was cut but it is the only one I have. Post hasn't carried, which does seem a bit strange. HW 2/9/73

Why did Paul Hoch who, as a physicist should have known better, attempt to duplicate the JFK head-shot with wrongly-attached melens? Why did Bob Smith, of CTIA, also a scientist, FEB go off on a kick about explosive bullets without satisfying himself that the incontrovertible evidence parmitted consideration of their use in the JFK assassination? I have often wondered about this atypical behavior by both. If Smith went off on his kick because Garrison had talked of explosive bullets, it was a long-delayed reaction. In The Day of the Jackal, Viking 8/71; Bantam 9/72, the assassin uses explosive bullets and for sighting his place in, we a melon. The Day of the Jackal is said to be based on fact. I don't know if it is and I see nothing wrong with serious consideration of a modelist's ideas, if they can be given serious consideration without known factors ruling them out. In both of these case, there is no doubt that what is not reasonably questioned rules out the use of melons with respect the JFK head wound(s) and explosive bullets as causative. EW 2/11/73

Larry, Ben Begdikian, now National Correspondent of the Columbia Journalism Review, has a long 1-2/73 piece on the success of Agnew's attack on the press, including partial record CDN. It is largely analysis and statitusics on the treatment of the Watergate arrests and related stories. I think you'll want to have it (about 12 pages). If you do not get the mag., let me know and I'll send you a copy. I do not know what else is in the issue because a xerox was sent by a young student friend and that is all I've seen. HW 2/11/73

After reading the piece last night I put a note in the HR envelope asking him to send you a copy. The copy will be a better one and HR has much cheaper and ever-so-much faster facilities, which will not over-expose as my machine sometimes does. If the commentary on the press will not be news, the factual record, beyond you or me, will tell you that what we'd suspect is the case, in spades.

Howard has sent me a 13-page piece by Ben Bagdikian in the Jan-Feb 72 Columbia Journalism Review, The fr fruits of Agnewism. From the first page it is bery good. I can lend it to you or if you think you will want, I think it would be cheaper for me to make the cooies or cheaper still to ask him to. Ben says the plan worked, the press was intimidated, etc. He is now CJR National Correspondent. I've not read piece yet. HW 2/10/73

Early a.m. all-news radio WAVA today reported DJ confirmation of FBI Segretti investigation, no other details. It seems to have UPI service. There was no story in the edition of the Post we get. Got into town too early for NYTimes, which couldn't have arrived by then. No AP B wire story in local paper. It is a rather interesting development on which I'd appreciate anything you see, for there is presumeably nothing now known that was not known before. As for law violations, the charge used against the Chicago 7 would be at least enough for a legitimate justification of investigation from the first, from what has been published, so I infer the downplay was not accidental. Aside from election-law charges. Seems unlikely that this kind of story would break too late for Monday a.m.s. HW 2/12/73

Jules Wircover has a long piece today, headed "More Nixon Radio:President likes to over TV, likes the selective audience." The whole things boild down to nothing. Selective audience? Except when he has to pay for time, which is during campaigns only, were thank it true that there is the "selective audience", he would still be throwing most away. I think the real reason is one of his more serious hangups: he does not think he is pretty. Perhaps another, this concept that those who don t drool over him, son't accept his lies as gospel, those mongers of "elitist rumors" and "instant analyses" on TV are really out to get him and to distort and misrepresent on TV. Also paranoid. He is a liar and he doesn t like to be exposed for what he is. I think he is trying to use his power as President to undermine TV hw 2/12/73
