

HW:

As you can see, the Firing Line transcript came through the other day. I've monitored the tape, and attach a memo showing the differences; two copies for you, one for each of the two transcripts they sent you -- perhaps you'd like to give the extra to someone like HR.

As we read the transcript and listen to the tape again here, we do not draw the inference that Hunt actually ~~had~~ had a copy of his original recommendations in hand at the time, that is, the original document. Seems he could have recalled them and jotted them ~~down~~ down from memory. The possibility remains open, of course, that he had the original from the CIA, but as you make clear that seems to be taking an unnecessary risk.
