

JDW: Reur 1/31/75: I had no identifications on those stories that bore none. I have asked and asked and asked by some of those who supply these copies are impervious to requests and needs. They can be dated approximately by the time I sent them, which was shortly after I got them.

FEB 6 1975

On another subject, I'd appreciate the wise counsel of your electronics shop. Lately I have had many tapes to dub for JL and for security. You recently received a memo indicative of one. I never know when. I was just called from Europe when I was outside carrying in firewood, so I also don't know the conditions of calls. I hate to think of taking the TC40 off the desk because I have needed it while dubbing with JL's as the second machine. So, I'm thinking of what I can't afford and can't afford not to do, get a second machine like the TC40. I would appreciate advice on two things: whether the newer versions are as dependable as this magnificent machine has been (I could use some of the new features, esp. a counter); and whether some of those costing less are good. I do not want a larger machine. I could be interested in a smaller one if dependable, for use as the primary machine when I travel. Small as the TC40 is, when I travel I now feel every punce. With a second machine, I could dub to the Craig while I'm doing other things. And I could also get the overworked Craig a going over that is overdue. I keep it by the TV and ready to tape via an alligator cord. I tape