

JDW: If you have not phoned your electronics shop on the submarine, don't take the time now. Only one is serviced locally. I was there today between the blood test and the optical examination of which you have a carbon of what I have JL to have on file. It is competitive in price, is made by a company that specializes in office equipment, fits a pocket, holds twice as much tape and works from two penlights. I hear well of the line and I need look no farther with it being the only one I can get repaired here. The local company was sold out. The literature seems to indicate an output plug. If so, this would permit direct dubbing.
