14 unsolved fatal bombings here since '62

Continued from Page IA

Treatment Co., was left critically injured with burns over 27 percent of his body when a black-powder pipe bomb went off in his car as he was returning to his West St. Louis County home from his office. Authorities say they know of no motive in the bombing.

- In 1977, two South St. Louis County persons were killed in separate bombings and another nearly killed when bombs went off in their cars. In all three cases the bombs were homemade pipe bombs wired to the fuse box of the car and exploded in parking lots. All three bombings remain unsolved despite a lengthy police investigation and offer of a $20,000 reward.

- In May 1975, ex-convict Walter W. Eberhardt, 35, was fatally injured and Doyle Lawrence, 21, was critically injured when a bomb that appeared to be made of the dynamite explosive C-4 went off in their car on a St. Louis County road. Investigators said they believed the bombing may have been revenge for Eberhardt's relationship with underworld figures.

- Oct. 23, 1972, former St. Louis Police Lt. F. Lyman Davis, 55, was killed when a bomb, believed composed of dynamite, exploded in his Cadillac on an Overland supermarket parking lot. Investigators said they believed the bombing may have been linked to Davis' relationship with underworld figures.

- Aug. 25, 1972, Pipefitter muscleman Louis D. Shoulders was killed and the business agent T. J. Harvill injured when a bomb exploded in Shoulders' car at Table Rock Lake near Branson, Mo. Shoulders was working for the Local 562 business manager Edward Steska, who was shot and killed in his union office Feb. 25, 1972.

- June 27, 1972, Duncan Miller, 40, a corporation lawyer, was seriously injured when a briefcase containing a bomb blew up in his car parked in a Collinsville parking lot.

- July 24, 1970, Phillip F. Callanan, 60, president of Continental Telephone Co., was killed when a pipe bomb exploded in his car on a St. Louis County road. Callanan was blown through the top of the car and landed 224 feet from the wreckage in a school field on Redman Road near Bellefontaine Road in Spanish Lake.

- Oct. 25, 1970, Louis C. Malone, 58, president of Louis C. Malone's Electrical Contractors, was killed when a pipe bomb exploded in his car on a St. Louis County road. Malone was injured in a car crash on his way to work and was later injured in a car crash while driving home.

- March 18, 1970, former convict Jesse Wilcox, 43, died when a bomb exploded in his car on a South St. Louis street. Police say they believe revenge was a motive in the bombing.

- May 10, 1969, Howard F. Miller, 34, was critically injured when a pipe bomb exploded in his car on a St. Louis County road. Miller was injured in a car crash on his way to work and was later injured in a car crash while driving home.

- Nov. 12, 1965, Michael J. Buckley, 26, a construction worker who police said had underworld ties, was killed when a dynamite bomb exploded in his car on a Uplands Park street.

- June 29, 1962, Charles Jefferson Hollis was critically injured when a dynamite bomb ripped through his car on the parking lot of a Normandy shopping center. Hollis, then 37, was described by police as an East St. Louis hoodlum. Two men with him suffered less serious injuries.