Cuban spy chief speaks out

As director of Cuban counterintelligence units monitoring the activities of anti-Castro Cuban exiles in 1963, Escalante is Cuba's most authoritative expert on the Kennedy assassination. From 1976 to 1982, he was head of the Cuban State Security Department (known as G2). He conducted numerous investigations and operations designed to break up CIA plans to subvert Cuba and assassinate Fidel Castro. He was later admitted by the CIA in various U.S. government commissions. In 1978 he directed a special Cuban investigation in response to a request from a U.S. congressional committee examining the Kennedy assassination. He has written and spoken extensively on the subject, including the first ever interview with Cuban counterintelligence chief, General Fabian Escalante.
